

Anti-corrosion of wind turbine tower

Overview

---

This is where anti-corrosion coatings come into play, ensuring the longevity and efficiency of wind turbine towers and blades. The next decade will see a boom in renewable energy – with that comes the requirement to address asset installation, protection and maintenance, all critical to asset. Larger. Offshore wind turbines are designed to have a service life of 20-25 years, but corrosion can cause ongoing problems for operators in terms of maintenance, and in doing so, have a significant effect on the overall cost of energy. Are extended coating lifetimes possible?

What about the corrosion protection?

Thank you for your attention! . Concerns over reducing CO<sub>2</sub> emissions associated with the burning of fossil fuels in combination with an increase in worldwide energy demands is leading to increased development of renewable energies such as wind. The installation of offshore wind power structures (OWS) is one of the most promising.
